When a King Found His Song. The International Sunday School Lesson for June 13 is "The Blessed of Forgiveness."—Psalm 32.

(BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.) In some matters we bow to our tyrannus modernity; but in all fundamentals of life we know that there is no change. Essentials of life remain as they were millienniums ago. What was most important in the days of the control of the c was most important in the days of King David is still most important to-day. Three thousand years have passed since King David sat on his throne of spiender, and in that day his supreme concern was his relation with Jehovah. Spiritual values were placed higher than all material interests. The profoundest utterances of David had to do with the state of the human soul. Spiritual peace conhuman soul. Spiritual peace con-derned him more than military glory. "Ah, but that was long ago," says "Ah, but that was long ago," says some up-to-date youngster. "These modern days are more practical." Not and cold and relentless in all his transactions, a veritable money-making machine. One day last February he was going along Fifth avenue when he hailed my friend, saying, "Look here. You are the very man I want to see. I want to talk with Pardoned spirits are given a new Pardoned spirits are given a new when he hailed my friend, saying,

"Look here. You are the very man I want to see. I want to talk with somebody. I was over in Philadelphia ner day and I went to hear that illy Sunday. I thought I was ill emotionalism, but Sunday depths in me that I didn't existed. The spiritual emotions man Billy Sunday. that I had experienced as a young man came flooding over me again. I confess to you that I wept as I listen-ed to him." Can it be that this man ed to him." Can it be that this man of millions whose time was so prebious was spending daylight hours and sitting on a board bench listening to an untutored preacher talk about to an untutored preacher talk about ain and forgiveness and the love of which the world cannot give or take sin and forgiveness and the love of Christ? Ah, my friend, there ere many men of might and money who would give their last dollar to know many men of might and money who would give their last dollar to know the secret of peace which the Gospel ligion.

When public leaders and the peoper secretary with the peope

When the Millionaire Wept. other. I had seen them both at the Billy Sunday tabernacle in Philadelphia while the preacher was swaying a multitude. The crowd was moved mightily by him; but then, say the critics, they were only the gullible masses. Yet these two millionaires have such a standing that there is no have such a standing that there is no business man in America who would not admit their practical shrewdness and modern efficiency. Both are a power in the national life.

The other, himself an active Christian, said to me a few days later. "I never saw X. so affected as he was that night. Tears ran down his face. He was touched to nis deepest heart by that simple message Affer the by that simple message. After the meeting he went with me to my home and we talked for a long while about the sermon, and about faith in Christ and about what it means.

Spiritual peace is still the supreme concern of mankind. There are unnumbered lives today, which outwardly seem brilliant and prosperous and favored, which nevertheless carry breaking hearts because of the spiritual unrest and consciousness of spiritual unrest and consciousness of unforgiven sin. Verily nothing else counts but being right with God. That alone is real success. Man's relation with his Maker is the one theme worth agonizing over, as King David agonized and wept over it in this Thirty-second Psalm.

The Master of Music. There is a plano in a certain home, which is a good piano according to market standards, but for the family it had never produced any great mu-sic. The baby thrummed on it, and it had never produced any great music. The baby thrummed on it, and the boys played mechanically labored tunes. Occasional guests would personal guests with the personal guests with the personal guests would personal guests with the personal guests would personal guests with the personal guests which the personal guests with the personal guests form conventionally upon it. Then one day there came to visit that home a real master of music, a great per-former. Then followed a revelation of the possibilities of the piano. It seemed as if the flood-gates of har-mony were opened. The whole room was transformed. The instrument it-self seemed a new creation after once the master-touch had been upon its

Suddenly as we studied last week, Nathan revealed the sinning king to himself. In agony of spirit David cried out for forgiveness. He knew where to go in his hour of need. Pity those whose feet are not accustomed to the path to the Mercy Seat. David, penitent, confessed and was pardoned. Then in new and profound joy and with a fresh understanding of the character of God. David broke forth in his new song; the song of forgiveness, which is today's lesson:

"Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered.

"Blessed is the man unto whom Jehovah imputeth not iniquity, And in whose spirit there is no guilt. When I kep silence, my bones wasted Through my groaning all the day long. "For day and night Thy hand was heavy on me: disture was changed as with the ought of summer.

"I acknowledged my sin unto Thee,
And mine iniquity did I not hide:
I said, I will confess my transgressions
unto Jehovah;
And thou forgavest the inquity of my

"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go:
I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee.

"Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding:
Whose trappings must be bit and bridle to hold them in,
Else they will not come near unto thee.

"Many sorrows shall be to the wicked; But he that trusteth in Jehovah, loving-kindness shall compass him about.

"Be glad in Jehovah, and rejoice, ye And shout for joy all ye that are upright in heart."

The New Song.

Only sin confessed, is sin forgiven. That is the heart of this Psalm. Un-confessed sin is unforgiven. It is like a canker in the center of life that affects all the being. We may accept it as a fundamental spritual truth, that modern days are more practical." Not a bit of it, my boy. Look deeply enough into life and you will find the same things which mattered in the days of Noah. Let me tell you two stories to illustrate my points.

The first was told me by a good friend with whom I lunched at the Union League club on Fifth avenue in New York. My friend had named a "big business" man, known as hard and cold and relentless in all his transactions, a veritable money-mak-

The last word taught by David in this lesson is "Get right with God."

> The Young Man's Day. Terse Comments on the Uniform Prayer Meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies-Christian En-

Mark 1:16-20.

(BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.) Ah, the thrill, the glory, the possibility of being alive in this day, and of being a young man! Never was there such a time for youth's achievements as this. All the enginery of our marvelous inventions, and civilization, which enable a man to reach ization, which enable a man to reach the whole world almost in the twinkling of an eye—all the speed of modern travel and communication—all the wonders of organization and business—all the idealism of time's most open-minded day—all the readiness to let youth think and speak and act—all, all is given into the hand of the young man as opportunity. Imagine what the Apostle Paul might have done had he this century's facilities! Like prepared soil, eager to produce a rare harvest, the heart of humanity every where has been made expectant every where has been made expectant and fit for a new message, a new sec-vice and a new leadership. It seems as if all things had been made ready for a fresh and splendid ministry to God's world in Christ's name by the young men whose hearts have been young men whose hearts have been fired by the Young Man of Nazareth.

"In our joys and in our sorrows, Days of toll and hours of ease. Still He calls, in cares and pleasures, 'Christian, love Me more than these.'

Three marks of manhood are indiwas transformed. The instrument itself seemed a new creation after once the master-touch had been upon its keys.

All the while the music was there within the plano. It only needed a master-hand to bring it forth. So it is with these sin-scarred, all-restrained lives of ours. They need upon them the emancipating touch of the master-hand of Christ. With His cooperation the least of us can be and do more than we have ever dared hope or dream. Nobody ever attains his full, possibilities of peace and power until his life has been given over to Christ.

The Silent Harp.

For a year King David's harp had been silent. It had lost its music of God's peace. Sin had broken its strings. The great minstrel was mute. True, he had triumphed in passion's plot of lust and murder. Uriah was dead and Bathsheba was his. Yet David's inward unhappiness was greater than words could express. He knew himself separated from God. Nothing went right with him. There was strife and unpleasantness in the palace. The misery of life, the suicides that seem so mysterious, can usually be explained by the one little word "sin."

Cated by St. John, after he had rispend in the service of Jesus. "I have written unto you, young men, the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the evil one." So runs the familiar passage from the second chapter of John's first general letter. First, young men are strong. They can. Power is theirs. To do and to the summons. Second, they are Bible-students. The appeal that the exhilarating word of God makes to the summons. Second, they are Bible-students. The appeal that the exhilarating word of God makes to the summons. Second, they are Bible-students. The appeal that the exhilarating word of God makes to the summons youth is even greater than its appeal to comfort-seeking age. Idealistic, altruistic, inspiring, the word finds a congenial home in the breast of youth. Third, young men are strong. They can be read to the summons of God makes to chival rous youth is even greater than its appeal to comfort-seeking cated by St. John, after he ripened in the service of Jesus.

Chaste as the virginal illy on her stem.
Yet in each hot, full pulse, each tropic velu.
More filled with feeling than the flow'r
with sun;
No auchorite—hale, sinewy, warm with I come in youth's high tide of bliss to Thee,

The average young man today has privileges and facilities and opportunities which Alexander the Great never enjoyed.

No man truly answers Christ's call without wanting to repeat it to some-body else.

A holy life in the twentieth cen-tury is not essentially different from a holy life in the first century. Only it sheds its radiance and fragrance farther. Our world has widened; and each of us is imperial in the number of people he may affect.

Were the whole world good as you-not an atom better—

Were it just as pure and true.

Just as pure and true as you;

Just as strong in faith and works;

Just as free from crafty quirks;

All extortion, all deceipt;

Schemes its neighbors to defeat;

Schemes its neighbors to defraud;

Schemes its neighbors to graud.

Would this world be better?

If this whole world followed you—followed to the letter—
Would it be a nobler world,
All deceipt and falsehood hurled
From it altogether;

Malice, selfishness and lust
Banished from beneath the crust
Covering hearts from view—
Teil me, if it followed you,
Would the world be better?
—The British Weekly.
Comprehended in a phrase, the call of Christ to core young man is "Followed".

Comprehended in a phrase, the call of Christ to every young man is "Follow thou Me." He wants them, like the young Galileans who made up His company, to be His disciples. They are to share His work, do His will and learn His mind. That is a life pursuit offering amplest scope for the fullest powers of ablest manhodd. All the world acclaims the primacy of Christ's leadership today. There is no other career equal to sharing His life and work.

An Indian patriot, whose abilities have been recognized and honored by the British government, Hon. G. K. have been recognized and honored by the British government, Hon. G. K. Gokhale, a Brahman, has rallied a few choice youth into a remarkable organization, the "Servants of India" Society. This wise Brahman has frankly appealed to the loftiest idealism of youth. He, like Jesus, offers his followers a cross. Although from the highest castes, they accept the name of servant. Among the vows taken upon admission are these:

"That the country will al-

"That the country will al-ways be first in his thoughts, and that he will give to her service the best that is in him.

"That in serving the country he will seek no personal advan-tage for himself.
"That he will regard all In-dians as brothers and will work for the advancement of all, without distinction of caste or creed.
"That he will lead a pure personal life.

"That he will engage in no personal quarrel with any one."
Such devoted bands as this mean more to a nation or a social order than many a great political party. Would that our own country and the church might have more of them. For, as the little band of apostles have proved, a group of young men willing to sacrifice all things, even unto life itself. rifice all things, even unto life, itself, for their ideals, can change the face of the whole human order.

Call the roll of achievers and mark the ages of the great. Surely the lesson is, in the lines of Emerson,

"The youth replies, 'I can!"

One recent writer tells us, "that Raphael painted the Madonna of St. Anthony at 22 years of age, the Sis-tine Madonna at 27. Shelley wrote his sublime drama, 'Prometheus Un-bound,' at 27. Alexander Hamilton wrote two of the most influential political pamphlets of his time at 17; and at 20 he joined Washington's pri-vate staff. John Calvin published his Institutes of Theology at 27. Burns wrote three of his greatest poems at the same age. William Pitt was chancellor of the exchequer at 23; at 25 he was one of the foremost men of his time. Mozart composed an opera for the Opera House at Milan when 15 deavor, etc.—for June 13. "Christ's years old; at 21 he had written 300 call to the Young Men of Today." est composer of Europe. Keats won an immortal place among English poets and died at 26. Edison at 22 received $40,000 for a telegraphic invention. Isaac Newton ignored all the authority and tradition of time, and discovered the law of gravitation at 27. Bell didn't know he couldn't talk from Denver to Boston, so he invented the telephone at 29."

> Christ's call to greatness is a call to suffering, to sympathy, to service, to saintliness to saviorhood. "It is enough that the disciple should be
